As a former Ag. High Court Judge in Trinidad & Tobago, Ian tried 11 capital murder cases. He now conducts all manner of criminal cases, for the defence, and prosecutes on behalf of the General Medical Council. He is an approachable, detailed, hard-working, tech-savvy, tenacious, pragmatic advocate, who is down to earth, relates well to a jury, has good court presence, is popular with his lay and professional clients and commands the respect of the Court or Tribunal.

During the 8 years he lived in Trinidad, he practised from Trinity Chambers, in Port of Spain, and defended, mainly in capital murder cases, occasionally acting, virtually pro bono. He was appointed an Acting High Court Judge of the Supreme Court of Trinidad and Tobago, and held that office from January 2006, until returning to the UK, in late 2008. Three of the capital murder cases he tried have been considered by the Privy Council:

- Julia Ramdeen v the State, Privy Council Appeal No 0077 of 2012
- Nimrod Miguel v the State, Privy Council Appeal No 0037 of 2010
- Burnett v the State, Privy Council Appeal No 0043 of 2009

He keeps himself up to date with current developments in the law, and is trained in Rape and Serious Sexual Offences and the handling of Vulnerable Witnesses.
